

CBT Triangle Expanded

The CBT or cognitive triangle helps us understand how our thoughts, feelings, and behaviors all affect each other. Because they are all connected, sometimes they can reinforce each other and make each other stronger.

Think about a time that you felt a strong emotion. Use this worksheet to review your experience in slow motion - breaking down each part in the sequence to understand how they affect one another.

Situation
What happened

I got a text from my boyfriend that said, "Can we talk? It's important."

Thought
What went through my mind

"Oh no. He's going to break up with me. It must have been that argument we had yesterday."

Feeling
Then I felt...

Dread, sick to my stomach

Behavior
Then I did / had the urge to...

I wanted to pretend it never happened. I turned my phone off and tried to distract myself.

Behavior
Then I did / had the urge to...

I turned my phone back on and texted, "Yes, is everything okay?"

Feeling
Then I felt...

Worried, concerned

Thought
Then I thought...

"Maybe it's not what I think. Maybe something bad happened to him or to someone else."
