

Because both our emotions and our thoughts can influence how we react to difficult situations, before we act, it's important to:

check the facts

1

Name your emotion and its intensity from 1-10

Use an emotion wheel if you need help

2

Describe the event that prompted your emotion

Describe observable facts, and challenge cognitive distortions

re-write the facts if needed

3

Check your interpretations, thoughts, and assumptions

Think of many other points of view and test your assumptions

re-write the facts if needed

4

Check if you are assuming there is a threat

Label the threat, and note how likely each of its outcomes are

re-write the facts if needed

5

Check if you are assuming there is a catastrophe

Is catastrophe likely? If it does happen, how could you cope?

re-write the facts if needed

6

Does your emotion or its intensity fit the true facts?

Now that you have the true facts, ask your wise mind
