

Cope ahead with difficult situations

A life “worth living” is one in which our actions align with our values. Use this worksheet to select and translate one value into specific actions by setting related goals.

1 Think through problem situations

What situations would likely prompt strong, difficult emotions? Describe one in detail.

What emotions or urges would make dealing with this problem difficult?

2 Plan your response

How could you best respond? Be specific. Consider problem-solving, mindfulness, distress tolerance, and interpersonal effectiveness skills.

3 Imagine the situation

Imagine being in the situation now, as vividly as possible. What would you think and feel? Picture being in the situation in real time.

4 Visualize success

Imagine coping effectively. What would you feel, think, do, and say? What if new problems arise? Picture being in the situation in real time.

5 Relaxation

Purposely engage in a relaxation exercise or activity.
