

Problem Solving Steps

DBT: Emotion Regulation Skills

handout

If your emotions fit the facts, that means the situation is causing the problem.
Changing the situation might help you feel better.

problem solving

1

Describe the problem situation

What is making this situation difficult?

2

Check the facts of the situation

Also check whether the intensity and duration fit the facts

3

Identify a simple, realistic goal

What outcome needs to happen for you to feel better?

4

Brainstorm as many solutions as you can

Ask for help if you need to, and don't throw out any ideas yet.

5

Choose a solution that best achieves your goal

Consider pros and cons if you're stuck between two choices

6

Give your solution a try

Try the solution and keep track of the steps and outcome

7

Evaluate the outcome

If your solution doesn't work, try the next best solution
