

Four Ways to Solve a Problem

DBT: Emotion Regulation Skills

handout

According to Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT), there are only four ways to respond to a problem.

This infographic reviews each of the four ways and links to worksheets that can help you learn more.

Problem-Solve

- Change the situation: figure out the problem, check the facts, brainstorm ideas, and choose a solution
- Leave the situation or do something to avoid harm

Change Your Emotions

- Change or reduce your emotions so that you can feel better (even if the problem remains) through opposite action

Radically Accept

- Acknowledge that neither the situation nor your emotions can be changed
- Willingly accept this reality - which should reduce your suffering

Do Nothing

- Stay miserable
- Or, make things worse (!)
